

Editors Note

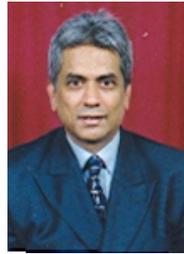

Dear Readers,

We wish our readers and their family members a peaceful Ramadan. In this issue, we welcome the new staff who joined NGi at the branches. Our new branch in Abu Dhabi will be fully operational in the next couple of weeks and I promise to keep you informed of the developments in Abu Dhabi.

We invite our readers to contribute articles of interest. We will try to include them in the coming editions.

I wish you a very Happy Eid.

A remedy to take property insurance forward

Faced with ridiculously low premiums, yet frequent and large losses (these are the hallmarks of the property insurance industry in the country) the Insurers are now beginning to shy away from contracts to write certain classes of property risks.

Insurers for many years in the market have been giving away their capacity at very low premium terms which is hurting the industry. No doubt the market will face difficulties with their Reinsurers and may even find it difficult to find new capital.

In the background that fire losses from the insurance of commercial properties in the year 2005 is said to have exceeded Dh 750 million in Dubai and Sharjah alone, I believe it is time to bring in a sensible solution. First and foremost, the Insurer(s) should employ qualified and experienced Risk Engineer(s) and conduct Surveys on all commercial properties and Industrial risks as a condition to insure those risks proposed for insurance. Also, risk engineering surveys must be conducted on all such risks already in the books. If the industry do so without exception, It would bring good quality information to the Underwriters and they will have the ability to analyze risks better as well as be in a position to extend assistance to the policyholders by providing risk improvement recommendations to them. I believe it is a worthwhile effort and would help the Insured to understand his risk through the eye of an expert which otherwise would cost the Insured money and time.

Now that the Insurers are “beginning to reflect” on those losses that I mentioned above, many Underwriters are becoming very cautious in writing property insurance involving warehouses & storage risks and may simply avoid accepting them by terming it as ‘not insurable’. I think there must be so many properties now going uninsured thus placing an extra burden of risk on many small and medium-sized businesses houses.

Going by the past experience, some businessmen would not do anything to improve their risks unless they are forced to do by a competent authority.

Similarly, the Insurer would not venture into writing risks, which they think are “unacceptable risks”. We know that most of the buyers are not “professional buyers” and therefore are ignorant about risk management issues and type of insurance they need. In this market, awareness of insurance among business managers is quite weak and it is therefore important to educate them – What happens if the buyer (business house) is not able to get proper insurance on his property, warehouses or stock?.

Most of the buyers don't get the “protection” because they don't have the expertise to develop and implement management strategies to improve and transfer the risks to the Insurance Carriers. It is not uncommon to observe that a vast number of them lacks knowledge about their risk exposures.

On many occasions, I have observed that business manager is unaware of the basic knowledge relating to safety and housekeeping issues. Therefore he is not even able to envisage the exposures and as a result he is quite often unable to insure; and when he has a loss the businessmen either have to find money to cover the loss or they will be forced to pull the shutter down. I don't know what's happening to them, I hate to think. But how can we collectively help them?

As a quick fix, I think the concept of compulsory property insurance legislation may work well for the benefits of consumers and sellers of insurance, which undoubtedly will contribute for the growth of the economy; provided the legislation is brought about to protect the buyer and seller.

I am aware that this kind of regulation may not exist in more developed markets. But, we have to ask why legislation is created in the first place. When it is done with the best intentions, it would regularize the market, promote growth and most importantly protect the consumer.
